Skinny Girls Don't Have OOMPH!

It takes those extra lbs. of solid flesh to "bring out" your natural curves

If you're otherwise healthy but skinny, scrawny, rundown and lbs. underweight, try correcting this common mistake in eating.

THERE are three essential substances that many thin, scrawny and undernourished girls may fail to get in sufficient quantity from the food they eat. These substances are Vitamin B_1, calcium phosphate and iron. If, like thousands of others, you are underweight without organic cause . . . never seem to gain a pound . . . are so thin that you look gangling and gawky from insufficient amounts of these precious elements, don't get discouraged.

You may find that by correcting this simple mistake in eating you can easily add firm solid flesh . . . extra alluring pounds that help bring out those natural eye-catching curves. A simple and easy way is to try the amazing new product called Numal that supplies, in significant amounts, the Vitamin B_1, calcium phosphate and iron needed in the daily diet. Plus a food that in itself is a great help in adding extra pounds.

Take 1 heaping teaspoonful of Numal 3 times a day. It is pleasant, assimilable and easy to take. You will get the equivalent in Vitamin B_1 content of 34 cakes of average moist baker's yeast . . . the iron equivalent of 15 pounds of tomatoes or 1⅔ pounds of spinach or 9 pounds of boiled beets...and the calcium equivalent of ⅘ths pint of fresh cow's milk, the phosphorus content of 1 glass

Remember, if you don't get a sufficient quantity of Vitamin B_1 in your daily diet, you may suffer loss of appetite. And without sufficient iron, the element that helps build rich red blood, you may be rundown, pale, weak and listless. You need calcium phosphate for sound teeth and sturdy bones.

SKINNY MEN ARE NOT ATTRACTIVE EITHER

. . . a skinny, scrawny body is no asset in social or business life. Give NUMAL a chance to build you up, put firm flesh on you.

Numal Must Please You or No Cost

So if you are skinny, gangling and bony from lack of these precious nutrients, don't wait any longer. Get Numal today. You will want those extra pounds that "bring out" your natural eye-catching curves. Take Numal faithfully for a week. See if you can't actually feel the difference . . . gain weight and better color. If after this short period you honestly don't feel Numal has benefited you, just return the bottle for a complete refund of your money. Numal costs but a few cents a day to use.

If loss of weight persists see your doctor

SOMETHING BLUE

ELSIE HARDMAN was doing her best to keep the moisture in her eyes from turning to tears. She sniffed twice and then turned her face to the window.

"Mother," she insisted with forced determination in her voice, "I just don't want to go to the Soph Prom. Mrs. Danners needs a baby sitter for that evening and thus I'll have four more dollars in my college bank account. And every cent counts these days."

However, Mrs. Martha Hardman with the wisdom that some mothers have, felt that something was wrong. She arose from her chair and walked over to the window. It wasn't hard to observe that her daughter's pale blue eyes weren't exactly shiny on this occasion.

"I think you have been protesting a wee bit too much about not wanting to go to that affair," she countered. "So let's come directly to the main point. Did John ask you to go with him to the prom?"

Elsie nodded her head in the affirmative. The sun rays hit her corn-colored hair and lit them up as though they were strands of gold.

"And you turned him down?" asked her mother in astonishment. "For the past three months all I have been hearing from you has been but one thought: If John Prentiss would only take me to the dance! I am certain you even said that in your sleep. What went wrong?"

There was a little sob from Elsie's throat. And the moisture in her eyes began to take an age old form. She managed to get the words past her charming lips.

"The committee got permission from the Dean to have this affair a formal one. State College is becoming well known and Dean Evans said there was no reason why the Senior Prom should be the only formal affair at the school. All I have is that old pink dress. The girls have been talking about the expensive evening gowns they are going to wear to the dance. And they all saw my pink dress when I wore it at Doorthy's party."

"Ah, woe is me," sighed Mrs. Hardman. "The problems a mother has with a seventeen-year-old daughter on her hands. You really should be very happy. You have saved enough money to see you through the first year of college. Too bad you didn't make the state scholarship. Just missed it by half a point. No use crying over spilt milk. But why all the hysteria over the subject of a dress? We can have that old dress cleaned at Bill's and even dyed. Believe me it will look almost new."

Elsie looked at her mother for a few minutes before replying. And then she said exactly what was on her mind.

"Mother dear, weren't you ever young? A girl just can't wear an old informal party dress to the Soph Prom which is going to be a formal affair. You have no idea how catty girls can be. They would all be talking behind my back. Of course they would be sweet to my face. No new dress... then no Prom! I would rather sit home and twiddle my thumbs than have my classmates pass remarks behind my back."

There was a far far away look on Mrs. Hardman's face as she placed an arm on her daughter's shoulder. She was strong enough to prevent any moisture from clouding up her eyes.

"If your father were alive he would know how to answer you," she began. "He would tell you the difference between true pride and the false variety. As long as what you are doing is honest and moral never let pride stand in your way. Was I ever young? All mothers once were, to the best of my knowledge. Just remember my dear that I met your father when I was just eighteen years — young or old. He had come to Tahiti to paint native life. I met him on the beach as he was trying to get an old beachcomber to pose for him. Three months later I was engaged to Richard Anthony Hardman. And the first picture he sold was one of me in a Tahitian gown that I modeled."

When Mrs. Hardman finished speaking a light smile played over her lips. There was a look of inspiration in her eyes that plainly said an idea has just been born.

"Go up to the attic, Elsie," she said to her daughter. "Bring me down any of the cloth remnants you may find in the old wooden trunk near grandfather's picture. I'll model a dress for you that will make you the belle of the Prom."

When John Prentiss called for Elsie on Saturday night at eight o'clock he was wearing the new tuxedo his father had just bought for him at Stephen's Men's Shop, located on Main and Third Avenue. In his right hand John held a transparent plastic box which contained one lovely gardenia.

"Elsie will be down in a few minutes," said Mrs. Hardman as she welcomed the school's best pitcher. Almost five feet ten, with his broad shoulders, brown eyes and auburn hair, he was a man for all of his eighteen years on this planet. He tried his best to appear accustomed to his formal wear though both his knee caps insisted on hitting each other.

Ten minutes later Elsie entered the room, John arose from his seat, gazed at her, and then uttered a long, "Ohhhhhhhh." At the same time his heart began to skip a few beats. There was so much that he wanted to say that the net result was he said nothing.

"You like my dress?" questioned his young lady who seemed to his eyes to be some kind of a fairy princess upon this earth.

"The dress, oh, the dress... why, yes!" John managed to get past his lips. And then in that minute Elsie understood what every girl has to learn. When a boy likes a girl she becomes his fairy princess and though she were dressed in rags, in his eyes her clothing would be those of silk and gold woven by some magic hands.

The main event of the Soph Prom was to be the Grand March. Instead it was Elsie's dress. Everyone admirred her light blue cloth dress draped around her shoulders in semi-Grecian style. And the gardenia in her hair heightened the effect. And Frances Schot, of Phi Delta, who rarely ever said a pleasant word, made history that night.

"Elsie, what a wonderful dress. You certainly have exquisite taste. By the way, next Thursday afternoon we are having a tea. Right now I want to tell you that you are invited."

And the hostess, Mrs. Mary Pitman, who was Soph counselor, introduced Elsie to a gentleman. He was middle aged with greying black hair.

"I want you to meet Mr. Roger Hall of the Dress Institute of America," said Mrs. Pitman. "He is an admirer of your father's paintings and also of that dress. He wants to know if you designed it yourself. He thinks it would capture the country."

John had a hard time from keeping the fellows from cutting in on his dances. For everyone wanted a dance with Elsie but she did her best to see her escort kept most of the dances on the card.

"Every eye in the place is on you," whispered John into her ears as they passed the bandstand. "We are going to lead the Grand March and Mr. Hall wants us to be his guests after the dance at a special party he is giving at the Hotel Biltmore."

Everyone was down to see Elsie off to the Big City where she was going to take a steamer for France. The Dress Institute had voted her a special prize so she could go to Paris for a two-week stay. The railroad platform was crowded with reporters and photographers. Elsie's bank account was swollen with royalties from the season's latest sensation — The Tahitian Gown. Stores from coast to coast were featuring the dress which everyone was buying.

Mr. Roger Hall was standing next to Mrs. Hardman. And John was next to Elsie, mighty proud that she was his girl. Burt Maxwell of the Star-Gazette asked that very important question.

"The country has gone mad over the dress your mother modeled for you. But where did you get that exotic cloth for it? Is it true a Hindu Prince gave it to you?"

Elsie looked at her mother before answering. A look in her mother's eyes told her to tell only the truth. And the train's whistle warned her time was running short.

Elsie stepped on the train steps and replied, "Just an old curtain mother had purchased in Belgium."
